It relieves the little sufferers at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. How Into Each Other.

PHILADELPHIA, June 14.—By a collision with an excursion train on the Camden road this morning, Engineers Palmer and Baxter, Conductor Smith, Baggage-man Vaughn, Mail Agent Wylie and Fireman Barber were killed. Many persons were injured. The excursion party were of the Camden Presbyterian church. Frank Fenton, supervisor of the road, and G. Edwards were also killed on the Atlantic road accident.

The crash was caused by the non-receipt of a telegraph dispatch. Both engines were smashed.

Following is a list of the injured:

Henry Deets, scalded and hip badly broken.

Frank McCormick, leg broken and scalded.

John Carkey, slightly injured.

William Carkey, internally injured; can't live.

Joseph Rosenbaum, express agent, badly injured about the head and back.

A. Glenn, internally hurt.

Cora Myles Lippencott and her brother, Eugene, slightly injured.

The injured were placed under medical attention and removed to Camden.

One of the passengers said that after the collision all scrambled out of the car, some by windows. Both locomotives were demolished. The escaping steam for some time made it impossible to approach within fifty feet. Great excitement prevailed among the people on the two trains, especially among the women and children.

They Will Encounter Again.

Dubuque, Iowa, June 14.—Preparations are completed for a grand encampment to be given here next week, the occasion being important because it is the first time since the war that the regular army and the militia will be camped together. Among the companies to be present are the following: Light battery I, of the fourth artillery; battery D, of the fifth artillery; two companies of the fourth infantry; all of the United States regular army of American rifles, of Washington; the Mobile rifles; Treadway rifles and Branch guards, of St. Louis. Fire Record.

CHICAGO, June 14.—A dispatch from St. Paul says that a fire broke out this morning in a row of frame houses on Seventh street. A brisk wind was blowing at the time and it looked as if the fire would spread to a number of brick business blocks, but it was finally gotten under control, after destroying eight frame houses and a number of sheds.

Loss, $20,000; insured for $2,000. One man had his leg broken and hair burned off, but was finally rescued. There were a number of other narrow escapes.

Wabash Paper Not First Class.

New York, June 14.—Some of the Wabash paper has gone to protest. Wabash notes are allowed to go to protest before payment so that all endorsers will share equally the responsibility. Massachusetts Independents.

Boston, June 14.—The independents of Massachusetts opposed to the republican presidential ticket met yesterday at the Metropolitan. H. L. Pierce called the meeting to order. He said the nominations made at Chicago were not up to the high standard of the republican party. Charles W. Codman was chosen president, and Henry L. Pierce, secretary. The vice presidents included President Eliot, of Harvard; Julius H. Seelye and Samuel Hour. Colonel Codman, upon taking the chair, criticised the platform of the republicans because it declares that this is a nation and not a league of states. The democratic party has its opportunity now.

Fierce resolutions were adopted against the republican nominees and a committee of 100 was appointed and also a committee of twenty-five, to go to New York to confer with the independent republicans of New York, June 17. The committee is headed by Colonel Codman. Letters from Congressman Lyman and other sympathizers were read.

A meeting at Ashley shop was held yesterday, but the action was not made public.

Neuralgia's Big Brother

Neuralgia means nerve-pain. There are in the human system nerves of many kinds and great variety of sizes. Each nerve has its own function, and each its own particular work to do.

In the leg, running downward from the hip, is the great Sciatic Nerve, which, with its branches, carries telegraphic messages from the brain, through the leg, to the extremities of the foot. When the Sciatic Nerve is affected, you have Sciatica.

Sciatica is one of the worst and most agonizing forms of nerve-pain or neuralgia. You may with comparative patience wait through an attack of neuralgia in face or head. That is bad enough, but when Sciatica seizes you, you are helpless.

There are various forms of Sciatica. People speak of Rheumatic Sciatica, Sciatic Rheumatism, Sciatic Neuralgia, and all that sort of thing. Call it what you please, it is the disorder of this great Sciatic Nerve. There is just one thing that will stop it.

That one thing is ATHLOPHORES. It neutralizes that vicious condition of the blood which causes the mischief. In a word, it conquers the whole family of rheumatic and neuralgic ailments. Working quickly, pleasantly and thoroughly, it leaves no evil effects.

If you cannot get Athlophores of your druggist, we will send it to you on receipt of regular price—one dollar per bottle. We want that you buy it from your druggist, but if it is not to be had, send us a check or money order, but order at once from us a directed.

BEGINNING THE BATTLE.

The Graduates of the Grammar Grade
Close Their School Life With Appropriate Exercises—Address by Hon. A. P. Edgerton and the Papers of the Graduates.

The pleasant lecture hall in the Central Grammar school was packed last night by a brilliant assemblage, attracted to witness the twentieth annual commencement exercises of the High school. The spacious room was tastefully festooned and quite attractive and agreeable. Shortly before 8 o'clock the grand march announced the approach of the graduating class, and soon the forum was occupied on the right by the choral class, on the left by the teachers, while the graduates were grouped nicely on either side of the center. On the stage were also the members of the school board, Rev. W. H. McFarland, Supt. John S. Irvin and other distinguished guests.

Rev. W. H. McFarland arose at 8 o'clock and invoked the heavenly blessing on the schools of the city, their promoters, and especially did he solicit divine grace and blessing for the graduating exercises and the participants.

Under the direction of Prof. W. F. Heath, a song was rendered by a class of sweet and well-trained voices, which was appreciated.

Hon. Alfred P. Edgerton, president of the board of school trustees, slowly arose to deliver the annual address and with a peculiar twinkle in his eye he shadowed THE SENTINEL representative, who recently had occasion to peep into school board methods for this journal, which effected a decided reduction in the school tax levy. Mr. Edgerton greeted his hearers with respect and thankfulness for their encouraging presence and began a vigorous defense of the school management. He said the schools might require protection but thought the school board could take care of itself. He said an unfriendly attack had been made on the management of the school board by people without an accurate knowledge of affairs or people desirous of controlling the school funds for purposes now foreign to them, but felt constrained to congratulate himself that the city council had sanctioned their cause by re-electing Hon. O. P. Morgan a member of the school board.

A familiar explanation of the school funds followed and the fact of a reduction in the school tax this year noted. The enumeration of school children was reviewed and the alarming absence from public and parochial schools of a large percentage of children was referred to as menacing to the republic. The public school system and method of employing teachers was eulogized and tender solicitude expressed for the promoters of parochial schools and mixed heads, for whose final conversion to the American schools he hoped.

Herman Freiburger, a bright young man, saluted the school trustees, the superintendent and teachers and the assemblage on behalf of the graduates and appropriately greeted each. Mr. Freiburger closed with an oration on the coming metal, aluminum which he confidently predicted would supplant the baser and more crude one now in use. The young gentleman betrayed a thorough knowledge of the sciences.

Miss Lillie Bowen portrayed nicely the "Study of Words." She examined the development of language and the grand work of philologists, the "The Hand Maids of History."

John E. Blockman insisted that the township was the "Palladium of our Liberty," and pretty well established his claims in a forcible and logical manner.

Miss Edith E. Emig read a pretty paper on "Our Flag." The history of the "Silks" she nicely pictured, and their growth into importance and significance as the emblems of the nation. The part national insignia play in the battle of life, was nicely stated by the young lady.

Miss Carrie Fisher told of "Clouds as the Poets Paint Them," and pictured the beauties of language and nature in very pretty style.

Miss Ada S. Gumpner looked into "History as a Mirror," reflecting the glories, reverses and life of nations that all who follow may profit by the expense of the past.

A Lincoln Rogers deprecated the too frequent "Compromise of Principle," and forcibly pointed out how men leave the path of right and duty through love of public applause. The overthrow of principle was a serious menace and one of the worst of modern evils.

Miss Hattie Rosenthal's essay, entitled "What Should We Read For," was well conceived and nicely written. The influence that lead people to read barren subjects with barren objects could scarcely tend to elevate mankind intellectually, thought the young lady, who cleverly pointed the proper and profitable way to read and what to read.

Miss Katie A. Ross believed the words of truth spoken of the dead were more noble and lasting than monuments of marble. The modern "Panegyrics," however depart from the truth and depreciate what honor is paid to the noble dead.

William D. Kyle told how politics had created new words or rather applied to old words new meaning. The most important of these was the "scratcher," who managed to keep political parties in the path of right by the frequent use of the ballot and pencil.

Miss Harriett Jones told of the advantages of knowledge in strengthening the mind to a degree of power and influence, that a familiarity with subjects can alone attain.

John T. Douglass' oration was "What the People Read." John C. Able spoke on "The Ideal Farmer," and George E. Randall on "The Problem of Municipal Government." The young men acquitted themselves in scholarly style and deserved the applause given.

Miss Lucy C. Smith read a paper on "Motors," reviewing the powers that propel civilization, and Ada A. Neireiter read an essay on "Iron as a Civilization." Both subjects were thoughtful and well conceived by the young ladies who portrayed intelligence and culture.

Miss Maggie Colerick read probably the best paper of the evening, on "Characteristics," while Miss Maggie L. Goshorn read a pretty essay on "The Daisy, the Poet's Love," and Matilda E. Knight pictured the beauties of "Short Poems."

Miss Carrie F. Guild, one of the brightest and prettiest graduates, delivered the scholastic valedictory and read a fine essay on experience as "Our Greatest Educator."

Chester T. Lamo delivered the closing address to the class, and Hon. A. P. Edgerton conferred the diplomas, after which the entertaining exercises closed with benediction.

A Suggestion in regard to Campaign Equipments.

To the Editor of THE SENTINEL:

A resolution should be offered at the Chicago democratic national convention prohibiting any and all extravagance during the campaign. No expensive paraphernalias or uniforms should be bought to equip the clubs or voters of the democratic party. It is not desired nor necessary to follow suit of the plumed knights of the republican party, rank and file. The democratic party has not obtained funds corruptly and from the sweat and labor of the working classes of the country, of the laborers, mechanics and farmers, therefore demonstrations are necessary to run the campaign and to form clubs in the wards in every city throughout the United States. All well, but let the equipment be plain and of solid material. If possible let us collect as much funds by subscription from men who can spare small or larger amounts before taxing the poorer classes.

If a fund for campaign purposes can be collected as stated above and equipments bought, then, if the committee in charge to procure the same should find the collected funds not sufficient it would be time enough to tax equally each member for the amount wanted, which would be but very small to each. The writer would propose that some substantial suits of blue or brown jeans, consisting of a blouse and pants and a serviceable cap, (styled after a laborer's rick) which would be becoming and desirable by the best timber of the country. Then after the campaign the members of our party can wear it out at pleasure and it would have been of no material expense to any one because they would have the wear and tear and the good of it afterwards.

The equipments adopted by the republican party are expensive and aristocratic and of no good to anyone after the campaign. It may be true that all and any voter of the republican ranks will not have to pay one dollar or one cent for his knighly plume of honors as such, and we do not object to it, and desire not to inquire where the money came from where with the equipments are bought. The democratic party is, and has been, the protector of the laboring element of this country, and will remain so, and should do now all in its power to cut expenses and extravagances to suit the times, and there can be no doubt but what we will come to victory by wise and good managements. Yours, very truly,

SHOPPERS.
Fort Wayne, June 13.

The proof of the pudding is in the eating, so the merit of a medicine is brought out when applied in a peculiar stubborn case of disease. A. S. Walker, of Central avenue, Pittsburg, writes concerning a lady friend in McKeesport, Pa., who for over a year had suffered from a most violent type of rheumatism. She could hardly lift hand or foot, and a greater part of the time she was laid up. Her sufferings were intense, and she was given up by the doctors. Two weeks' use of Athlophores wrought a complete change in her condition, and she is now greatly improved.

List of Inmates.

This is a strange world. Strange because of its variability, because of the many classes which inhabit it. True it is that the one-half does not know what the other half does nor how they live. Could they but realize their conditions all the tender qualities of a sympathetic people would be aroused in the effort to assist and relieve the sufferings of those "pinched by want," and who are literally starving—dying by inches while surrounded by plenty, a small mite of which would brighten the flickering flame of life which now burns so feebly and which must soon go out forever. Contact with suffering hardens rather than softens most hearts. It brings with it a feeling of indifference and carelessness and the oft repeated importunities of beggars receive no response and awaken no feeling of sympathy or of compassion. The heart grows cold and the poor boy is passed upon the street, who, in rags, stands shivering from the cold as he begs for a penny; or the poor widow who lives near, who has long been struggling to keep the wolf from the door and who has exhausted her strength and now lies ill, unable to provide for herself that which is necessary to sustain life, is forgotten in the enjoyment of a pleasant home, surrounded with all the evidences of prosperity.

The care of the poor has been a perplexing question to all civilized countries but in no land has there been such preparations made for their maintenance nor such an amount of money expended for their support, as in the United States, the home of the oppressed and the down-trodden. Here all find an asylum where they may live in security and peace, undisturbed by any sort of by any ruler, and here they find protection and a home in their distress. Here, also, the poor unfortunate, when no longer able to fight the battles of life and when they feel that they must find help or that the end must soon come, find buildings erected for their comfort where they may remain until a life of misery, of unhappiness and toil changes to one of pleasure, joy, and rest—eternal. It is certainly a commendable feature of a nation which has been, as so often said, given over to money-making and to personal advancement, that such comfortable homes have been provided for their poor and that such a vast amount of money is yearly expended for their support, that they have such a home where they may receive the necessities of life without money and without price.

But the poor are not the only inmates of these places. Have you ever stood before the walls of a building known as the "county infirmary," and noticed those iron gratings at the windows? Have you never heard the shrieks of the inmates or saw a face pressed close against the bars, a face lighted up by an unnatural glow and with eyes flashing and hands clutching the bars as if it must be wrenched in twain, telling the story of deformed reason and of a life devoid of happiness and peace? Such creatures are also the inmates of our county infirmaries. They are the poor unfortunate who, having lost their mind in the strife of life, have been sent by their friends to the asylums for treatment and have been returned with the cruel verdict that they are past all cure, that Reason has left her throne nevermore to return, and that henceforth their lives must be a blank and they must be placed where they can do no harm but where they may receive the attention and care necessary until the sands shall run through the hour glass of their lives and they may be laid away in the grave where king and pauper are at last made equal.

There is yet another class who sometimes become inmates of these homes, although some counties have provided for them a separate place. It is the children, and this is the saddest portion of all the list. The parents who have had a weary struggle through life, hoping against hope for a turn in the tide which might bring to them better, happier and more prosperous times, and finally, when stricken down and death claims them, leave to the world, entrusted to its cold mercies, the care of their helpless children, a legacy which proves of no benefit to the country but only a burden and a charge. Better if that child could have been buried with its parents. A poor mother compelled herself to appeal for aid and at last, when unable to obtain it, is placed in the charge of the county, brings with her that child, which is as dear to her as the little son of the wealthiest man in the city. Yet the one is doomed to live for years among the idiotic, insane and the many classes which compose the inmates of the "poor-house," surrounded with none of the comforts which make life pleasant, develop the mind or divert it from the unpleasant features which compose its existence while the other is given all the advantages that wealth can bestow. The one a pauper, made so by the force of circumstances, the other a prince because of the mind which has been trained and cultivated.

There are others there. The idiotic, who meet you with a laugh that causes a cold shiver to pass over you. In those eyes there rests no expression, only a blank, vacant stare and from whose presence you feel like flying. The old men and women are there, those who have grown gray in life's service and when the night of age has come upon them, have been compelled to seek the county-house—the most dreaded of all places, the one place above all others where they most dislike to go. The once wealthy are there, those who have amassed a competence and then seen it swept from them when they are too old and feeble to begin again anew. "The young and careless are there. That portion whose sins have cast them out from the society of respectable people and who no longer able to find employment, are driven to the last extremity. They are all there, representing nearly all nations and nearly all climes, forming a group which affords a wide field of study for the philanthropist, a heart-rending picture for the sensitive and sympathetic and an example of the changes of time and the uncharitableness of the world.

OUR COUNTY'S CHARITY.

Allen county has not been slow to provide an asylum for the unfortunates within her boundaries and that which was commenced many years ago as an institution of this character has now grown to immense proportions. Her buildings and farm, provided for this purpose, are a credit to the charity and benevolence of the people of the county.

The beginning of this enterprise, or, more properly, home for the poor, was in June 1853, when the county purchased a tract of land in section thirty, of Wayne township, and a contract was made with John A. Robinson to erect a suitable house for the county, to cost $750. In December of the same year, George L. Parker was employed to keep the paupers one year, for the sum of $800. The next year an addition was built to the poor-house and the contract with Mr. Reliance, who had been employed as superintendent, was extended for a period of six months at $1.75 each per week for the keeping of the inmates and he to pay $250 for the use of the grounds to put out a crop. It seems the commissioners became dissatisfied with this plan, for a short time afterwards they engaged a superintendent at a salary of $800 per year. As the population of the city and county increased and a greater demand was made upon this institution the commissioners decided to build a new house and with this end in view, sold the old farm and purchased the one now in use. A house was erected at a cost of nearly $16,000 and as the demands for additional room becoming more urgent, wings were built at a cost of something over $15,000. This in brief, is the history of the growth of the house Allen county has provided for the poor and unfortunate. The location is a most desirable one and the building, which is well adapted for its purpose, is surrounded by beautiful grounds, making the place an attractive one to those who are compelled to make it their home.

OVER THE HILLS TO THE POOR-HOUSE.

A drive out to the poor-house of Allen county brings vividly to the mind that poem of Carleton's, where he sings with so much pathos and so much truth of the journey of an old lady, who having seen her family all married and comfortably fixed for life, had been turned out of doors by her own children when she most needed their assistance. Finally, after one and another have turned her away, she is compelled to go to the poor-house and as she goes tramping along the weary pathway to her living grave, Carleton makes her say:

"Over the hill to the poor-house I'm tramping my weary way—
I, a woman of seventy, and only a trifle gray—
I, who am stout and clipper for all the years
I've told,
As many another woman that's only half as old."

And so these lines came to a representative of this paper as he traveled the way, literally over the hill, for the purpose of writing a short history of some of the strange characters which inhabit the poor-house of our own county and who feed from the county's bounteous hand and exist by its charity.

IN THE PAUPER'S SITTING ROOM.

In a long room lighted by several large windows facing the west, sat thirteen of the female inmates. It needed no one to inform the reporter that they were insane: the garrulous, chattering idiosyncrasy of one or two, the expression of settled melancholy on the countenances of the others demonstrated beyond a doubt that mental darkness was over all. The evening sun was just setting and its warm rays fell about in the fast darkening room. Every inmate looked out at that sun and in their looks could be noticed a longing for the outside world, for the light and beauty outside, a longing that may not have been definite to themselves but which impressed the visitors with a great pity.

One of the inmates, a child of stunted growth but whose face looked like that of an old woman, sits in a small rocking chair with her hands idly clasped in her lap.

As the sun sank lower and the darkness grew denser, several would press closer to the window as if loath to lose one glimpse of the brightness without—a brightness that they seldom witnessed except through barred windows. It was a scene that could but faintly be delineated by the painter's brush—words are powerless to describe it.

DELLA MILLER.

One of the inmates who is certain to attract attention is Della Miller, a little girl aged probably twelve or fourteen years. The child is apparently intelligent, but possesses the strange phenomenon of being double-jointed. In obedience to the request of the matron the little girl arose from the chair in which she had been rocking and turned her hand back to the wrist. She walks about the place, is well developed, except in height, being very short and inclined to feebleness, and suffers no inconvenience from the strange action of the joints of her body. Her history is sad. In August, 1883, her parents lived in this city and one night were both arrested for drunkenness and placed in jail. Later the father was sent over to board out his fine, while the mother, Hulda Miller, was adjudged insane and removed to the hospital at Indianapolis and the two children, Della and a son, were sent to the poor house. Afterwards the mother was returned as incurable and is now an inmate of the insane ward. The boy was adopted by a farmer living near Arcola, and the little girl remains at the poor-house, allowed to grow to womanhood without any attention to the mind except the little that can be given her there, and surrounded by all the unpleasant characters with which the place is filled. In answer to a question as to her age she said she did not know and refused to talk further.

DRIVEN CRAZY BY TROUBLE.

Another peculiarly sad case is that of an old lady, bent with age, with hair as white as the driven snow, who wanders aimlessly about the place or sits and stares vacantly through the window. Being anxious to learn her history, she seemed ready to talk and with much intelligence. There was no hesitancy or faltering, but with a voice which bore the feebleness of her extreme age, she stated that she was born near Columbus, Ohio, in 1804 or 1805; that she moved with her husband to a farm near Mayaville some sixteen years ago, and that there her companion died and she was left alone. After his death she lived alone upon the farm until one day, in passing from the house, she fell and broke her arm. That happened, she thought, four or five years ago and in order to become fully restored she was brought to this place by some of her relatives. "Do you want to go back?" asked the reporter, and then a strange bright light came into her eyes as she eagerly said: "Oh, yes; I want to go back to Columbus, where I have a brother living. This place is not home to me. I do not want to be on the county when I have enough to keep myself. I have my farm yet. The taxes were all paid up when I left, and there was nothing against it." And as the reporter turned to leave her, she said most beseechingly, "Oh, won't you tell my friends how bad I want to come home; how bad I want to leave here, so that they may come and take me away?" And the promise was given in order to pacify her. She was taken back to her cell, and with a heavy sigh she passed through the door, which closed after her. Her description of her troubles, except as to dates, was given with accuracy and tallied exactly with the account given by the superintendent. From him it was learned that she once owned a fine farm, as she had described, but that her husband's death had do-throned her reason and she had been an inmate of the place since September 7, 1876.

A CONTRAST.

In strange contrast with the case just mentioned was that of a woman who paced the floor continuously or who sat with bowed head, staring vacantly at the floor, all the while murmuring to herself and rubbing her hands together. This is Mrs. Leuzinger, who is about forty-eight years of age. She was adjudged insane in 1862 or '63, and application was made for her admission to the asylum, but she was rejected and was sent to the county asylum, where she has since remained. She speaks German and it was impossible to converse with her.

INCURABLE.

Mrs. Lizzie Dignun, an incurable patient, is a widow with three children and is incurable. As the time approached for her to be locked in her ward she arose, shook hands with one of the inmates, bid her good-night and retired.

SHE LOST HER HUSBAND.

Several years ago on board one of the vessels which crossed the Atlantic was a man and wife named Murray. They were on their way from Ireland to seek their fortunes in the much-famed America, where wealth was supposed to pour upon the poor and down-trodden of other nations. While the noble vessel was ploughing her way through the water the man was taken ill. Carefully and tenderly the wife watched by his bedside, administering as best she could to his wants, but the lamp burned lower and finally night came on and the soul went to meet its God. There was a quiet funeral service and the body was buried in the deep sea, a grave unconfined by space. The wife continued her journey alone, after reaching New York, towards Chicago, where she hoped to meet friends. She reached New Haven, this county, where she wandered helplessly and penniless about until her condition became known and she was removed to the asylum.

A YOUNG EIGHT YEARS AGO.

Mrs. Susan Melzer was adjudged insane and sent to the hospital, but was shortly afterwards returned and was again, later, sent back for treatment and the second time returned, this time with the statement that she was incurable. She is violent at times, and her hair has been clipped in order to keep her from tearing it out, which she frequently did before this precaution was taken. Now she sits with bowed head, stolid and indifferent as to what takes place about her. She is the mother of four children and once presided over a happy home in this city.

TWENTY YEARS OF DARKNESS.

Twenty years ago there lived in Jefferson township a family named Grover. They were happy and contented until a dark cloud came upon the wife and mother, destroying her reason. She was at last adjudged insane and sent to the asylum, but found no relief and was returned. This was repeated, but with no better success than before and then she was placed in the house which was to be her a living grave. Happily she does not realize her position and her surroundings. But one thing impresses her and that is the horrible Bolet murder, which occurred near her home, where the father, mother and son were made the victims of a monster's lust for gold. Of this she speaks frequently, but not connectedly, her principal theme being the fear that she was to be summoned to appear before the grand jury to testify in the case. It is not improbable that it was this crime which caused her to lose her mind. When seen by the reporter she chattered glibly and said, "Oh, I am going to take a ride to-morrow. Yes! Mr. Wilkinson and me are going away off in the car and I don't know when I'll come back; may be not for two or three days." The next day she was taken to the asylum provided for her class, where her life will, no doubt, end.

A WITTY SUBJECT.

Upon walking into the insane department, the matron said to one of the women seated on a bench near the wall: "Anna, the gentlemen have come to see you." The woman arose and, extending her hand, said: "How is the democratical affair at any rate?" She was told that they were all right and then an attempt was made to engage her in conversation, but with poor success. An accident, which occurred on the grounds, by which a man was thrown out of a wagon, seems to have impressed her strongly and she dwells upon the circumstance. This patient, whose name is Anna Telford, came from Brownstown, this state, and was placed in charge of the county in 1876. She is the mother of two children. She talks frequently about her husband murdering a man at Quincy, Ill., several years ago, but her conversation is so rambling that nothing definite in regard to the matter can be obtained. She has also been removed to the hospitable for the incurable.

A MURDERESS.

Caroline Rabel is, so far as is known, the only person who has ever been in the care of the county who has committed murder while an inmate of the poor-house. She entered the place in February, 1862, and was a resident of the county before her admission to that place. Her age is not known. The principal interest which attaches to her life is from the fact already noted, the murder of a little child. One day in August, 1863, the inmates were out in the yard where they were permitted to loiter and move about in order to give them sufficient exercise. Among the number were a Mrs. Barthall and her child, a toddling babe, who unconscious of any danger, was playing about in her innocent glee. Suddenly this woman, Mrs. Rabel, seized her and in her fiendish frenzy proceeded to carry out the designs of her insane mind. Carrying the child to a secluded portion of the grounds she laid the babe on the ground and then seizing several sharp sticks she drove them through its body literally

PLACING IT TO THE EARTH.

Before she was discovered she had accomplished her purpose and the little life went out to satisfy the cravings of a mind unbalanced and not accountable for its acts. She never mentions the affair and it seems to have passed entirely out of her mind.

IN ONE OF THE CELLS.

Peering through the gratings of the door stood Mrs. Lizzie Sheekler. With her the superintendent held an interesting conversation for the benefit of the listeners. She rambled along carelessly and aimlessly as it seemed, moving from one subject to another as all insane persons are wont to do. She imagined she owns the farm on which the house is located and says it contains 100 acres for which they paid the magnificent sum of $800. Being asked how old she was she called upon her father, who she said was near her, for an answer, and was much annoyed at not receiving it promptly. She agreed with the superintendent that she was about six years old, the same age as he, and that they were twins. To her husband, she says, she was never married and that some one attempted to poison him, giving him "a whole spoon full of it." Her prevailing theme is that her parents are close by her and that they never forsake her. The facts are that being left a widow, she and her son engaged in business at Huntertown, when, from some cause, probably from the loss of her husband, as in a number of other cases, she became insane. She became an inmate of the place in 1876.

THE MEN'S WARD.

Passing from the insane ward in which the women are confined to that in the opposite wing of the building we found the men's department. In the first cell visited was an old, gray-headed and gray-bearded man, yet seemingly strong and vigorous, who answered to the name of Robert Mooney. He arose from his bed, having retired for the night, and, shaking the visitors' hands, expressed himself as being glad to see them, inquired their names, homes and places of business and immediately said to one of the party: "Oh, yes! I remember you. You were a member of Company P." Mr. Mooney says he came to this place on the 19th day of January, four or five years ago. In reality he has been an inmate since 1859, a statement which the superintendent spluttered, but he was interrupted by Mooney, who said, "Yes, pretty d—n near it. Put it down '59." He further stated that he was sixty-six years old the 28th of December, at 9 o'clock in the morning. His father's name was John Mooney and was thirty-two years older than his wife. He was born, he says, at Walnut Tree, with its tops dead, near a spring in Ohio. He says that his trouble came from the actions of a couple of neighbors, whom he named, who had him arrested for obstructing the highway, and who sent him to jail and then had him placed out here. He owned a farm in Jefferson township and one in Jackson township, which he described to be the north half of the southwest quarter of section twenty-nine. The first election, he claims, was held in his house and gave the result of this election on a railroad scheme. He wants to go home in time to seed for the next crop and says the last crop turned out to be rag-weeds and cockleburrs, but he wants to ground up for cheat. When leaving him he begged pitiously to send him newspapers—"anything, only something to read."

CHARLEY ZIMMERMAN

also climbed out of bed to greet the visitors, but was not communicative to any great extent. He thinks he has been here four or five months, but has been an inmate of the place about three years. When asked what brought him here, he answered, "Insanity," and a ghastly smile, made all the more striking in the faint light, stole over his face. He is forty-five or fifty years of age.

JOSEPH WHITE,

an epileptic from Washington township, refused to talk. He has been at the place about two years and the frequent attacks of this terrible disease has completely destroyed his mind.

A FEW YEARS AGO

Paul Sebelist was a machinist in the Wabash shops but in 1878 he was adjudged to be of unsound mind and was sent to the state hospital, from which place he was discharged in 1882 and removed to the place where he now is. The records show that he has been twice an inmate of the place. He is about fifty years of age.

A BRIGHTER HOME.

The case which attracts attention in the men's ward is that of a man yet in the prime of life. He is handsome to look upon and his face yet bears the mark of intelligence in spite of the terrible disease with which he is afflicted. This is Henry Farmer, a former resident of the city. From his youth he has been a sufferer from epilepsy and in its most violent form, but all his sufferings seem only to have made his faith stronger than ever in the hope of a brighter hereafter. When visited he was intently reading his testament, and said, in response to an inquiry: "Yes, it does me a great deal of good. If it was not for this blessed book I could not stay here, but this makes me stay. It gives me hope and teaches me that when my time comes to die that I shall go to a brighter home, a better place than this. It gives me consolation and hope. Yes, I read a chapter every morning and evening and have a season of prayer. When the weather is pleasant and I can work out I find a secluded spot where I can kneel and pray, and it gives me strength to bear it. I was twenty-six years old the 13th of May (the poor fellow had, however, lost all trace of the years, and is about thirty-five years old). My relatives live in the city, but they thought it best that I should come here because I had so many of these fits and they could not very well take care of me. I sleep on the floor so that if I take a spasm I will not fall off my cot. I sometimes have twenty during the night."

His case would melt the hardest heart in the land. Afflicted as he is yet he is intelligent and uses very good language. He fully realizes his condition and seems to be contented as long as he has the bible, his stay and comfort, by his side. As the visitors bid him good night, he responded in a sadder tone than before, as if loath to see them go, and then, turning to one, said, "O, can't you see my brother-in-law and tell him how bad I want to see him? Do you know how the folks are and how they are getting along?" and on being told that they were strangers he sighed as he said, "Oh! do you not know him?" The writer has heard many sermons, but has never been more deeply impressed than by the one taught by this poor epileptic, whose faith grows stronger as his affliction increases. He certainly possesses an abiding faith, a perfect trust.

TWO BROTHERS.

The infirmary is filled with persons whose history is interesting and not the least of this class are two brothers, John and Arnold Stiltz, both of whom are insane. Their histories are almost parallel. When the war broke out, these two brothers volunteered their services in the effort to preserve the union of states and did valiant service for their country. Finally they were captured and both were confined in that terrible place, Libby prison, the mere mention of which even now causes a shudder to pass over every soldier. Here, after some confinement, Arnold managed to escape and after many privations and hardships, reached home, but when the family and friends greeted him they found a maniac. The terrible struggle for life and liberty had been successful only in part, for henceforth he was doomed to be shrouded in a cloud of darkness. The other, John, lost a leg in his country's service, but he, too, shortly after his return home, became insane and both now are inmates of the insane department of the infirmary. Arnold was never discharged from the service, but stands recorded as a deserter, a fact, though unjust, makes little difference to him.

A MOTHER AND SON.

For the past nineteen years John Linker has been an inmate of the place and in the female department is his mother; both of whom are incurably insane, although neither have been in the state's hospital. The son is about thirty-seven years of age, while the mother is past sixty. Their insanity is said to be hereditary. They formerly lived in Madison township. The mother entered the place about five years after her son was adjudged insane.

A TERRIBLE RIDE.

About twelve years ago Jeremiah E. Nead, aged probably fifty-five years, was first admitted to the place. He came from Monroe township. About eight years ago he succeeded in escaping from the place and, although it was bitter cold, he went to the barn of a farmer living across the river, named Bada, and stealing a horse started on his ride. He was recaptured but not until his feet were so badly frozen as to necessitate the amputation of the toes. He seems to well remember the trip and when it is mentioned laughs silyly but whenever he is told that "they are coming to put him in jail" he crawls into the corner of the cell trying to conceal himself. He refuses to talk.

A REGULAR CASE.

Since 1875 Charles Martin has been a regular visitor at the place, staying three or four months each year. The fellow was never considered insane and was given employment on the farm to pay his board. A year ago last spring the superintendent discharged him and he came to the city, when, in a short time, he began acting so strangely that a commission in lunacy pronounced him insane. He was sent to the hospital but was shortly afterwards sent to the infirmary. Martin was here allowed many privileges until on the first day of last January he attempted to commit suicide by jumping from one of the windows of the dormitory, which is on the second floor, to the ground; but the attempt was a failure, and he was not injured in the least. Since that time he has been kept closely confined. He was not in a mind to give any information and drove the reporter from his door.

A YOUTHFUL SUBJECT.

Henry Quinlan came here when a young boy and is now about thirty years of age, a short life spent in seclusion and under restraint. It is claimed that the cause of his insanity was the excessive use of tobacco. It is said that his appetite for the weed was what would be termed gluttony if applied to the eating of food. He ate it like the most palatable dish which could be placed before him. The result was a mild form of insanity. He is harmless and is employed in doing light work about the farm.

Among the old inmates of the place is Henry Bardakoff, a German, who has been a pensioner of the county since 1859.

With a heavy heart the reporter turned and retraced his steps to the city. When about a half a mile from the asylum he turned and looked back. The huge buildings loomed dark and dreary in the black background with here and there a light glittering in the windows. It seems in its dimness and at the distance, to be a huge mausoleum, a fitting tomb for the many unfortunates who undergo a living death within its walls.

A TOUGH GANG.

The Police Raid a Big Nest of Tramps West of Town and Pail Fourteen Vagabonds—Their Depredations.

For a week past a gang of tramps have infested the west end and terrorized people in that locality by their boldness and lawlessness. Near the St. Mary's river a day or so ago two men were held up and relieved of a gold watch and all the money they had. Yesterday afternoon the ragged gentry broke into the residence of Mrs. Barringer, rifled the bureau, drawers and robbed a trunk and stole about $60 worth of jewelry and clothing. The police were notified and Lieutenant Wilkinson and officers Lee, Palmer and Wahrenberg went west. On the other side of the St. Mary's river they encountered the vagabonds and promptly put them under arrest. The police judge heard the cases this morning and sent the party to jail for eighteen days. They gave their names as Joe Lakob, Mike Hithie, Mike Carroll, William Jordan, Tom Harris, James Daw, Jim Grupp, Harry Webster, John Anderson, Ed Murphy, William Barnes, George Fields, John Rice, Elmer Cramer.

BUTLER'S WICKEDNESS.

A Few New Facts in the History of Charles Butler, the Wife Murderer.

All the evidence goes to show that Charles Butler, who has been sentenced to be hung for the murder of his wife at Pierceton, is one of the worst characters who has ever disgraced the state by his presence. The testimony given during the trial stamps him as a villain of the worst type and one who has been the terror of all the different localities where he has lived. But much testimony which would have been favorable for the prosecution was not introduced at that trial, simply because it did not reach the hearing of the prosecutor.

A reporter of this paper yesterday met a man who has known the murderer since his childhood, who related many incidents in his life. Among others was the statement that about a year ago he went to his home and demanded that his mother should give him $10. Upon being told that she did not have it he threw her upon the bed and beat her in a horrible manner, bruising her face with his fists and leaving many bruises upon her.

Another time this man, whom his father labored so hard to save from the gallows, met him, the father, upon the streets and asked for $5. His father told him that he did not have any money with him, but that he would give it to him that afternoon. This did not satisfy his son's desire and, applying an epithet to him which is unfit to print, he jumped upon his father and gave him a terrible beating.

The gentleman further stated that if the Columbia City jury did not hang him the people of Columbus would, in regard to the money with which he was supplied after his escape from the Whiteley county jail, he stated that Charles went to the residence of his uncle near Columbus, and that the uncle went to town and informed his father of the affair. Mr. Butler said that he did not have it, but that if he would come back the next day he would have it ready for him. The uncle came and the $500 was furnished. The man giving the information claimed that the father was not much better in disposition than the son.

THE EDITORS.

The Annual Convention at Huntington—List of Officers for the ensuing year—The Banquet.

Yesterday the editors of the northern part of the state were most pleasantly entertained by the people of Huntington. The committee in charge of the arrangements had carefully planned all the details for a successful meeting and they were well carried out. Although the attendance was not as large as it was hoped and expected yet there were a goodly number in attendance and all seemed to enjoy themselves in the highest degree possible. In the morning a business meeting was held at which time the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President, J. O. Hewitt, Lagrange Register.

First vice president, W. A. Beane, of the Goshen Democrat.

Second vice president, A. T. Bitters, of the Rochester Sentinel.

Corresponding secretary, J. W. Baker, of the Columbia City Commercial.

Recording secretary, W. W. Ferrier, of the Angola Republican.

Treasurer, W. J. Hillegass, of the Huntington Democrat.

South Bend was selected as the place for the holding of the next convention and John B. Stall, of the South Bend Times; Q. A. Hessler, of the Warsaw Daily Times, and W. H. Scheffer, of the Angola Herald, were appointed a committee to prepare a program for the occasion. The time for the next meeting was fixed as the second Tuesday in June 1885.

In the afternoon the visiting brethren were driven about the city and to the different points of interest. At several of the time quarries preparations had been made for heavy blasting, which were fired by means of electricity. These at the quarries of the Hawley Brothers and Lillie & Munson, of this city, were particularly successful. At the last named, twenty-one blasts were fired and 1,050 tons of stone were dislodged.

Early in the evening the volunteer fire department gave an exhibition run, which elicited many compliments. Later a most sumptuous banquet was served at the Commercial house, at which the city officials and a few others were present. It was a feast well worthy of the name and the knights of the labor were a unit in doing justice to the occasion. The evening was one not soon to be forgotten.

The following toasts were proposed and responded to by the gentlemen named:

Invocation.....Rev. Sawyer
Welcome Address.....J. B. Stall
Our Guests.....S. F. Day
Our Association of Age.....L. B. McDonald
The Editor of the Sentinel.....A. T. Bitters
The Sentinel and the People.....T. F. Ferrier
Centennial and Centipetal.....H. E. Henderson
The Host.....R. S. Gray
Mine Host.....J. C. Hewitt
An End to All Things.....A. D. Mohler

After the banquet the brethren were the recipient of a fine box of cigars, with the compliments of Lillie & Munson.

The banquet closed the twenty-first annual meeting of the Editorial association and the different members present said their adieus and departed, all expressing the opinion that it had been the most successful meeting ever held.

Those present from Fort Wayne were D. S. Keil, of the Gazette, and wife; T. P. Keator and wife, John Lillie, Jr., George W. Sealey, of the Newspaper Union; Will R. Reum, of the Hoosier, and a Sentinel representative.

NOTES.

Q. A. Hessler, as master of ceremonies, was inimitable.

A strange feature of the affair was that a number of editors presented tickets to the conductor to be punched instead of the usual passes.

After the program prepared for the banquet had been carried out, the president called for general remarks, to which quite a number responded. Among others the following from Col. J. B. McDonald: "We shall always be safe as long as we have a little of the valley, a good Baker and splendid Bitters." Mr. John Lillie, of Fort Wayne, being called upon said: "It is my business to manufacture whitewash, not to apply it." J. W. Baker, of Columbia City, said "that all things were better after being baked." A. T. Bitters, of Rochester, was called on and thought silence was proper owing to the painful absence of "bitters" from the banquet.

THE WABASH.

The Receivers of the Road Make a Report and Find it Necessary to Execute Privately Fine Measures to Hold the System Up.

Judge Treat of St. Louis, has made an order, reciting that, having heard and considered the petition of the receivers of the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific railway company, the court finds that when the said receivers took possession of the road there was due to employees on account of services performed during the past six months a sum in excess of $1,000,000; that there was due for supplies furnished during the same period a sum in excess of $750,000; that there was due for taxes $174,000, and on account of mechanics' liens $30,000. The court further finds that there is not now, nor likely to be for some time to come, sufficient funds in the possession of the receivers with which to meet the above and other pressing and essential needs for the preservation of the property and the safe and economical management of the road. The court therefore ordered that the said receivers be empowered to issue receivers' certificates in a sum not exceeding $2,000,000, bearing interest at a rate not exceeding 7 per cent. per annum, to fall due in not less than one nor more than two years from the date of their issue, and that the proceeds thereof be applied to the payment of the indebtedness of the road for labor, supplies, taxes, etc. It is further ordered that the said certificates be not sold or disposed of at less than their face value, and that they be declared a first lien upon the property of said company wherever situated.

Mr. James H. Simmer, grocer, Jefferson and Wolf streets, Baltimore, Md., says: My wife's arm was severely scalded, and she received instantaneous relief, by two applications of St. Jacobs Oil. Fifty cents a bottle.

CAUGHT AT LAST.
Sheriff Schiefer Dispatches an Officer to Arrest the Crooks Who Burglarized Mergenthien's Store.

The robbery of Mergenthien's store in 1883 is familiar to THE SENTINEL readers. Various persons were suspected and a vigorous search instituted but without effect. A few days ago Sheriff Schiefer learned positively that Theodore Hays and William Mullen did the job and accordingly swore out affidavits against them. Requisition papers were obtained and today a deputy sheriff left for Peoria, Ill., to get his men. Mr. Schiefer has proof positive of their guilt, and is to be credited with clever and persistent work in bagging his game.

A new thing in the way of railroad rolling-stock is the result of the inventive genius for which Muncie, Ind., is becoming known in the patent office department. The new wrinkle is a live poultry car so designed and constructed as to enable the shipping of live fowls any distance by rail without any of the drawbacks attending the handling of "crates" and "baskets," as now shipped. A description of the car cannot fail to interest not only every railroad man, but every shipper of live poultry. The car is not unlike a stock car in general appearance, having four or five decks or floors far enough apart to accommodate standing poultry. Each deck may be separated by portable partitions into compartments, or the length of the car may be thrown together.
